(DALLAS – August 2020) – Bowman Engineering & Consulting, Inc., a Texas-based civil engineering and project management firm, has acquired Quadrant Consultants, Inc. of Houston, Texas. The employees of both organizations will remain with the company bringing the combined firm size to 34 professionals. Terms of the deal were not disclosed. In conjunction with the acquisition, Bowman Engineering hired industry leader Frank Benavidez, PE as Vice President of Houston Operations.

Acquisition expands footprint in Houston and strengthens service offerings

“Welcoming the talented Quadrant Consultants team members into our Bowman Engineering family has been the highlight of our year and is central as we support our clients and the growth plans for their communities. The combination allows us to quickly, seamlessly expand our existing footprint in Houston and Central Texas,” says Shauna Bowman, PE, founder and president of Bowman Engineering & Consulting. “An added benefit is the ability to strengthen our planning and environmental services work and to now provide aviation services for clients, as Quadrant brings a deep history of aviation work since its founding some 40 years ago.”

With clients throughout Texas, Bowman Engineering sought to acquire a firm in the Houston-Austin-San Antonio triangle to accelerate growth and better support its local staff and client base in the area. Quadrant Consultants – also known as Q Consultants – was founded as a civil engineering, environmental, planning and aviation services firm. In business since 1979, the firm has produced award-winning work in Houston, across Texas and for aviation centers throughout the United States.

“With any acquisition – especially during this fluid COVID-19 and work-from-home cycle, ensuring a culture fit is just as important as technical skills of the team. From the first conversation with Shauna and the Bowman Engineering team, we knew that our engineers were aligned in values, talent, and client service focus,” notes Michael Chou, former President of Quadrant Consultants and now Director of Planning with Bowman.
