

CMTA Expands Operations to the Carolinas

February 5, 2020

CMTA has expanded its operations to the Carolinas by acquiring McCracken & Lopez of Charlotte, NC and Columbia, SC. This joining of like-minded engineers who are dedicated to providing high-quality, client-focused service will revolutionize the practice of engineering throughout the Carolinas. Like McCracken & Lopez, CMTA has a strong background in higher education, K-12, local government and community facility design and adds expertise in the Healthcare and Federal markets. In addition to expanding McCracken & Lopez's MEP and commissioning services, CMTA brings a unique differentiation of services, including zero energy engineering, performance contracting, and technology design. Recognized as one of the top 25 engineering firms in North America and the nation's expert on zero energy design, CMTA has designed some of the most energy-efficient hospitals and K-12 schools in the country, including the first Zero Energy school. We apply a proven process that seeks unexpected solutions to challenging problems, including inventing new products, setting national standards, and performing research all while delivering exceptional results on all our projects. We couldn't be more excited for this joining of like-minded engineers who are dedicated to providing high-quality, client-focused service and will revolutionize the practice of engineering throughout the Carolinas!

Link to original press release:

<https://www.cmta.com/news/cmta-expands-operations-to-the-carolinas>