

DUNAWAY'S GROWTH CONTINUES WITH ACQUISITION OF DANIEL & BROWN, INC.

March 9, 2021

From our humble North Texas roots in Fort Worth back in the mid-1950s, Dunaway has expanded over the past six decades to include offices in Austin, Dallas Midland and San Antonio. Dunaway's recent acquisition of DBI Engineers of Farmersville continues that pattern of growth and also provides Dunaway with an additional business line.

"DBI Engineers provides engineering expertise in water, wastewater and civil infrastructure design projects for water and sewer companies, municipalities and utilities — services that compliment Dunaway's core strengths of providing civil and structural engineering expertise for public and private infrastructure projects," explains Ross Eubanks, Dunaway's Chief Revenue Officer.

DBI Engineers was founded 24 years ago by principal Eddy Daniel, who will continue leading the Farmersville office's 16 employees. The firm will now be known as Dunaway | DBI. "DBI's promise has been to build strong relationships with our clients," Daniel said. "Our firm is a trusted partner that provides quality engineering, project administration and construction inspection services to customers throughout North Texas.

"We joined forces with Dunaway primarily to keep up with the growth of clients in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex," Daniel added. "Dunaway brings a larger pool of resources that will help us build on our past successes and also adds additional multi-disciplined professionals to assist clients in new and unique ways."

Dunaway | DBI will maintain its office in Farmersville and continue to serve clients now backed by the knowledge and support of all of Dunaway. The firm's lengthy list of public works projects includes designing elevated tanks, pump stations, large diameter water distribution lines, wastewater treatment plants, ground storage tanks and water wells. Those projects dovetail with Dunaway's more than half-century history of providing civil engineering expertise in planning and designing water and wastewater systems for municipalities, cities and counties throughout Texas.
