

IMEG expands into Ohio with fifth acquisition of 2020

December 30, 2020

IMEG Corp. has acquired Cleveland-based Fredrick, Fredrick & Heller Engineers, Inc. (FF&H), the fifth acquisition by the firm in 2020 as it strategically grows and expands services and client collaboration across the U.S.

FF&H has been an engineering leader in the building construction industry since 1934, providing comprehensive design and consulting of mechanical and electrical systems for healthcare, education, and corporate clients. It has designed systems for some of the most advanced buildings in the greater Cleveland region.

“We are extremely pleased to welcome FF&H into our company,” said IMEG President/CEO Paul VanDuyne. “This strategic opportunity combines FF&H’s healthcare and MEP expertise with IMEG’s full-service work throughout the U.S. and creates a strong synergy for future growth.”

FF&H Principal Mike Long said his team is excited to begin the new year as part of IMEG. “We are looking forward to this partnership and moving into this next chapter of our firm’s growth,” he said. “This merger brings together decades of expertise and a passion for healthcare design and elevating the patient experience. We are excited to expand our service offerings and offer our clients and team members more opportunities.”

The firm’s leadership and team will remain, continuing to deliver a collaborative client experience and doing business as FF&H, now IMEG. They will continue to operate from the existing location in Cleveland.
