

We're pleased to announce the acquisition of Nelson & Co, PC.

January 6, 2022

The merger with Nelson further bolsters InSite's strategic plan to provide a full range of engineering services for both public and private water and wastewater utilities while expanding its geographical base.

The team at Nelson has been providing civil and process engineering services throughout Alabama and Tennessee for the past three decades. During this time, they have served numerous public and private owners while providing great value to their projects and their clients. This philosophical approach to long-term client relations is consistent with that of InSite and enhances the positive aspects of this merger. The Nelson staff will remain intact and continue to thrive as they become a part of the InSite Engineering team.

This acquisition by InSite will immediately create greater breadth and capacity in the services offered by both firms, but particularly in the areas of water/wastewater treatment and water resources engineering. The merger of the two firms will add strength and capacity to the company and solidify its position as a premier provider of consulting services to selected public and private customers across the region.

InSite is excited to add the staff of Nelson to its team and looks forward to adding their knowledge and expertise to the firm as it continues to grow and expand its operations.
