

Cardinal Engineering Merges with Parkhill

September 29, 2020

Parkhill and its Board of Directors have announced that Oklahoma-based engineering firm, Cardinal Engineering, has joined Parkhill and brings over 30 years of experience delivering high-quality civil engineering services to a wide array of clients in the Oklahoma region.

“Cardinal Engineering has a great reputation when it comes to service and quality of work in civil engineering,” said Jay Edwards, Parkhill President and CEO. “This partnership benefits both groups and furthers our mission of Building Community across Texas, New Mexico, and now Oklahoma.”

Established in 1989, Cardinal Engineering has focused on providing high-quality consulting engineering services from three offices in Norman, Oklahoma City and Woodward. Cardinal’s expertise, culture and values align seamlessly with Parkhill, which will benefit clients and provide new opportunities for employees.

Bill Swain and Rick Schlegel will continue their leadership of the Oklahoma offices and all Oklahoma employees.

“It is very exciting for Cardinal Engineering to be a part of Parkhill,” said Swain. “The merger brings 75 years of Parkhill success to Cardinal and a much broader range of A&E services than we have previously been able to offer our clients.

“Parkhill’s mission of “Building Community” is reflected in the comprehensive range of services offered as well as in the culture it brings to each and every project. The common culture that Cardinal and Parkhill share is central to us collectively being able to expand our geographic footprint and positive influence on communities.”

Link to original press release:

<https://www.parkhill.com/news/cardinal-engineering-merges-with-parkhill/>