May 4, 2022

Rimkus Consulting Group, Inc. (“Rimkus”), a worldwide provider of engineering and technical consulting services, today announced the acquisition of Commercial Construction Consulting, Inc. (“C3”), an international development advisory and engineering consulting company. The acquisition continues to expand Rimkus’ robust building sciences practice area, focusing on real estate, development advisory services, vertical transportation services, energy audits, and more.

“As our clients continue to grow, we are always looking for opportunities to better serve them. At Rimkus, we want our clients to contact us when they need answers to their most complex technical questions. We see that same philosophy at Commercial Construction Consulting as well. They have built an impressive company that understands every aspect of the building lifecycle, which makes them an excellent addition to Rimkus,” said Curtis Brown, Chairman and Executive Director, Rimkus Consulting Group, Inc.

“Boston has always been a growing market for us, particularly for façade inspections, and having a stronger presence in the area with C3 allows us to expand our service offerings to even more clients. Additionally, their expertise in areas such as vertical transportation will help us expand a growing area for Rimkus. We look forward to having their new perspective and working together to deliver top-level outcomes for our clients,” said Robert Kocher, President and Chief Executive Officer, Rimkus Consulting Group, Inc.

C3 combines expertise in areas such as real estate investment, development advisory, engineering, mechanical, electrical, and plumbing energy and sustainability and technical services. C3’s professionals have expertise in the latest technologies and techniques and provide actionable insight that cuts through the complexity and helps answer customers’ most crucial development questions. Their team serves real estate investors and companies, institutions, and public sector agencies globally.

“The opportunity to join a global firm with a terrific reputation such as Rimkus is something we have been considering for quite some time; we believe we found the perfect fit with Rimkus. As we integrate the C3 brand into Rimkus, we will expand to offer even greater technical services across a broader geographical reach. We look forward to unifying our teams and collaborating towards a single, shared vision for the built environment,” said James Kirby, President and Chief Executive Officer, Commercial Construction Consulting, Inc.
