

Lexis Group takes over Bucks County engineering firm

January 26, 2022

A York County company has taken over a Bucks County engineering firm.

The Lexis Group has taken over the operations of Singer Utility Engineering in Lower Makefield Township near Yardley. The Lexis Group acquired the equipment assets from Singer Utility Engineering. The three employees from Singer Utility Engineering joined The Lexis Group on Jan. 17. The Lexis Group now employs 14 people.

The Lexis Group won't maintain Singer Utility Engineering's office. The Lexis Group is located on Hialeah Drive in Carroll Township near Dillsburg. The company has operation centers in the Pittsburgh and Langhorne areas. But, all of its employees are working remotely.

Founder and president of Singer Utility Engineering, Van A. Singer will retire.

"I've enjoyed working with clients to advance their projects for more than 30 years," Singer said in a news release.

Singer founded the business in 2015.

Founded in 2009, The Lexis Group specializes in subsurface utility engineering and survey services. The group provides civil engineering, site design and landscape architecture among other services. The company is owned by Alexis Isenberg, Bryan J. Teschke and Ann M. Leiner.

Link to original press release:

<https://www.pennlive.com/news/2022/01/lexis-group-takes-over-bucks-county-engineering-firm.html>