

TRC Companies Inc. acquires Blue Oak Energy

July 12, 2022

Today TRC Companies (“TRC”), a company built to help lead the energy transition for its clients, announces the expansion of its renewable energy capabilities with the acquisition of Blue Oak Energy, a firm that specializes in engineering for commercial and utility-scale photovoltaic (PV), commonly known as solar, and solar energy storage projects. Over the past 17 years, this team of seasoned engineers, designers and consultants has delivered over 6 Gigawatts (GW) of solar projects through permit and construction and supported over 12 GWs of solar projects through development.

“By acquiring Blue Oak Energy, TRC expands its value to renewable energy developers as a full-service delivery team supporting projects from concept to operation,” said Christopher Vincze, Chairman and CEO of TRC. “This acquisition reinforces our strategic growth objectives, including a major expansion of our Climate Solutions offering, and strengthens our well-established ability to deliver integrated solutions for a wide range of renewable energy projects.”

Based in Sacramento, California, Blue Oak’s engineers are licensed in over 30 states, supporting long-term clients nationwide including utilities, municipalities, developers/Independent Power Producers (IPPs), and Engineering, Procurement and Construction (EPC) firms.

On average, TRC supports more than 1,000 renewable energy projects annually for hundreds of solar, wind, hydro and storage clients. TRC’s integrated solutions address all phases of development including site selection and evaluation, environmental planning and permitting, engineering and design, including collector stations, substations and grid interconnection, due diligence and transaction support.

“Joining TRC gives our clients access to a complete suite of solutions and resources to advance their renewable energy goals,” said Danny Lee, Senior Vice President of Blue Oak Energy. “Having partnered with TRC on development projects in the past, we are excited to be part of their dedicated and passionate multi-disciplinary team.”
