

Good Company joins Parametrix, expanding Climate Resiliency, Adaptation, and Sustainability Services

January 3, 2023

Parametrix, a 100-percent employee-owned engineering, planning, and environmental sciences firm headquartered in Seattle, has acquired Oregon-based Good Company, expanding the firm's climate and sustainability service offerings nationwide.

Good Company provides climate resiliency and sustainability consulting services for government and industry that serve human needs, including food, energy, water, transportation, shelter, materials management, clean tech, and finance. Service offerings include measurement and management of environmental and equity performance as well as public disclosures and supply chain management. Good Company has clients located across the United States, Canada, and Mexico, with supply chains in Central and South America and Southeast Asia.

"Together with Good Company, we continue to expand the depth of services we offer to the clients we serve, especially related to climate resiliency, adaptability, and sustainability," stated Parametrix CEO John Willis, PE. "We're thrilled to combine the benefits of Parametrix's infrastructure and environmental portfolio of clients, employee ownership, and our reputation as a best place to work with Good Company's outstanding position and reputation in climate and sustainability consulting."

"Good Company is excited to join the Parametrix team. Parametrix's knowledge and people will allow us to serve our clients deeply in more holistic ways," said Good Company founder and owner Josh Proudfoot. "We look forward to uniting our teams and enhancing what we can offer to all of our clients in supporting them in the transition to a clean economy and well adapted infrastructure."

Link to original press release:

<https://www.parametrix.com/who-we-are/news/2023/01/03/good-company-joins-parametrix>