

Borton-Lawson Joins Top ENR Firm Verdantas

January 12, 2023

Addition of Borton-Lawson Strengthens National Platform of Technology Integrated Engineering Solutions.

Verdantas, a private-equity backed provider of engineering, planning, science, and technical services to clients on environmental and sustainable infrastructure solutions, announced today that it has acquired Borton-Lawson (along with its subsidiary, Precise Visual Technologies, “PVT”), a provider of engineering, science and business optimizing technology consulting services. Borton-Lawson strengthens Verdantas’ position with facilities, transportation, real estate, water, and energy clients, enabling their digital transformation strategies.

“Borton-Lawson’s impact on our clients will be immediate, as we add bench strength to our sustainable civil infrastructure capabilities while also bringing new offerings that deliver facility solutions and value-added digital capabilities to the clients we serve across the US. I share the excitement of all our employees in welcoming Borton-Lawson’s unique and capable leadership and technical professionals to the team”, said Gerry Salontai, CEO of Verdantas.

Andra Kidd, Chief Growth and Strategy Officer of Verdantas, remarked, “Borton-Lawson’s approach to combining engineering expertise with digital technology to optimize their clients’ business operations and provide unique digital solutions in decision-making is the future of the environmental and sustainable infrastructure consulting industry.”

Borton-Lawson President & CEO Frank Joanlance says: “I am truly humbled by the culture we have created and the business we have built. Joining Verdantas, a nationally recognized firm, will allow us to get to that next level by offering all employees opportunities to grow, enhancing our service offerings to clients, and enabling further investment in the latest technology.”

Tony Brindisi, Co-Founder and Managing Partner at RTC Partners, said, “We are very pleased to welcome the team at Borton-Lawson and Precise Visual Technologies to Verdantas. Borton-Lawson brings new technical and professional expertise enabling us to enhance our service offering for clients, broadening opportunities for employees, and creating value for shareholders.”
