

Two longstanding Naperville architectural practices merge

March 23, 2023

Two long-time Naperville-based architectural firms, Charles Vincent George Architects and Newman Architecture, have combined their professional staff and design portfolios as part of a strategic transition of resources and clients.

The expanded office will continue under the name of Charles Vincent George Architects. The merger was initiated by Chuck Newman, the founding director of the 40-year-old company.

The alliance brings together the talent and resources of two established, award-winning architecture and interior design firms to strengthen their combined portfolio, broaden their focus on market sectors and broaden their capabilities under a single entity, the company said.

Charles Vincent George Architects has served the region for 60 years, was founded by Chuck George and is now led by President and CEO Bruce George.

“Having worked for Chuck George in 1978-1979, I knew his integrity and commitment to his clients. Since that time, my own practice has led to supporting commercial projects,” Newman said. “At the same time, CVG’s clients expanded to include both residential and commercial projects. ...I knew that the wealth of experience of each of our associates would serve our combined clients well.”
