April 24, 2023

Colliers Engineering & Design, a national multi-discipline engineering, architectural, design and consulting firm, is pleased to announce it has acquired Rogvoy Architects, PC of Southfield, Michigan. Rogvoy is a full-service architectural firm serving the state of Michigan and represents a fourth generation of company ownership and cornerstone of the City of Detroit's architectural community.

"Rogvoy has been dedicated to the evolution of the greater Detroit area for many years," said Kevin L. Haney, PE, President & CEO of Colliers Engineering & Design. "We're excited to be working with a firm with their heritage and such long-time contributions throughout the Detroit region."

This strategic step reinforces Colliers Engineering & Design's existing footprint in providing exceptional services to its clients while continuing to serve and expand Michigan's architectural needs. It also establishes Colliers Engineering & Design's third office in the state of Michigan, providing the firm with another important engine for growth.

Rogvoy Architects began in 1929 with Theodore Rogvoy, Architect, whose company became T. Rogvoy Associates, Inc. In 1999, Rogvoy Architects, P.C. was established and led by a home-grown, hands-on ownership team of Mark Drane, AIA, LEED AP, Rich Cleve, AIA, NCARB and Brian Rais, AIA, NCARB, CSI. The firm maintains highly experienced staff with expertise in all facets of Commercial Retail Design with a wide client base.
