

POWER Acquires Virginia-Based Earth Environmental and Civil, Inc.

September 5, 2023

POWER Engineers, Inc. (POWER) is expanding its presence in the Mid-Atlantic and Midwest regions by acquiring Earth Environmental and Civil, Inc. (EEC), a 22-person firm located in Rocky Mount, Virginia (south of Roanoke, VA).

"POWER and EEC have already successfully partnered on projects throughout the Mid-Atlantic and Midwest regions, so joining our teams is a natural fit," said Maria Gou, POWER's Environmental division manager. "They share our commitment to providing high quality work and responsive service to our clients."

Founded in 1989, EEC has an established history of providing environmental and civil engineering services to clients with an emphasis on meeting client infrastructure needs with minimal impact to the environment. EEC clients will benefit from increased civil and environmental engineering resources and additional environmental capabilities of a combined 400-strong POWER environmental team. In addition to extending POWER's geographic presence, EEC will also bring experienced practitioners with proven design practices and protocols to POWER, enabling the team to better serve clients in the electric utility market.

"We've always been proud to deliver large company capability with small company accessibility," said EEC President Jim Lovell. "We're pleased to join POWER, where becoming part of a much bigger team allows us to deliver more on the first part, and POWER's client-focused culture means we can still offer the same accessibility and responsiveness our clients value."
