November 30, 2023

Acquisition of WestLand Resources strengthens Trinity's ability to blend scientific, engineering, and planning excellence with technical innovation to solve clients' complex planning and permitting needs.

Trinity Consultants announces that WestLand Resources, an engineering and environmental consultancy based in Tucson, Arizona, with offices in Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, has joined its Water & Ecology pillar of business.

WestLand Resources joins Trinity's Water & Ecology team of experts from Trinity's previous acquisitions of Minnow Aquatic Environmental Services, ECOSA, Vision Environmental, Ecofish Research, and Soundview Consultants.

Since its inception in 1997, WestLand Resources has cemented its reputation for scientific rigor, technical excellence, and quality in environmental planning and permitting, cultural resources management, water resources engineering, landscape architecture, habitat restoration and natural resource management, facility compliance, and geographic information services. With more than 240 team members, including scientists, water and wastewater engineers, archaeologists, historians, ethnographers, environmental planners, landscape architects, and field technicians, WestLand relies on technical excellence, out-of-the-box thinking, and a focus on client service to help their clients navigate the increasingly complex planning and regulatory landscape.

"WestLand shares our commitment to technical excellence and client service to address the complex planning and resource issues our society faces today," said Mike Remsberg, divisional president of Water & Ecology at Trinity. "The company's complementary services, combined with its cultural synergies, will serve as the foundation to expand our engineering, planning, and environmental consulting businesses and ultimately set the stage for continued growth and innovation in North America."

Trinity and WestLand's missions are fundamentally linked, and the two organizations have supported the same clients for decades and partnered on projects for shared clients since 2017. Most recently, WestLand teamed with Trinity Consultants on a number of renewable energy and mining projects throughout the west.

"As a 100-percent employee-owned company, providing opportunities for our employee owners will always be at the heart of every decision we make," said Jim Tress Jr., CEO and co-founder of WestLand Resources. "This partnership allows us to build on the synergies we have enjoyed while working with Trinity to expand our geographic footprint, diversify our projects and client base, provide greater opportunities for career advancement, and realize our strategic and financial objectives faster."

2020 Environmental Group advised WestLand on its sale to Trinity Consultants.
