

Little Acquires Red Iron Architects

February 8, 2024

Little Diversified Architectural Consulting (Little), a national transdisciplinary design firm, announces the strategic acquisition of Red Iron Architects in Charleston, SC. Combining forces will broaden Little's services across the Charleston region and South Carolina and further grow the firm's areas of expertise in Community, Healthcare, Commercial and Mixed-Use sectors.

"Little has experienced unprecedented growth in our Charleston office since its opening in 2022, growing tenfold from a team of two to nearly 20," said Don Baus, AIA, LEED AP. Baus serves as Office President in Little's Charleston office. "We have been designing projects in South Carolina for the last 10 years, so it's a natural fit to further extend our presence in the Charleston region and the state."

United by a joint focus on client service, Little and Red Iron are committed to elevating client performance through collaborative partnerships. Both firms share a passion for innovative design that meets future needs while keeping clients and communities at its center.

"Our focus has always been to enrich the way people work and live," said Emma Souder, AIA, GGP, former Principal and Owner at Red Iron Architects. Souder now acts as Community Studio Principal in Little's Charleston office. "Now with our combined expertise, we can deliver even more innovative and sustainable design solutions that make life better for all."

"People are the heartbeat of everything we do at Little," said Carolyn Rickard-Brideau, Partner and Chief Executive Officer of Little. "We are excited to welcome the talented people from Red Iron Architects to our team and continue to deepen our relationships in the Carolinas."
