

Pace® Analytical Services Acquires Agra Environmental and Laboratory Services

August 07, 2024

Pace® Analytical Services, the preferred provider of regulatory testing and analytical laboratory services, and a division of Pace®, a science and technology company, today announced the acquisition of New Jersey-based Agra Environmental and Laboratory Services, Inc. (AELS).

“Our commitment to clients is unmatched. This is demonstrated through the acquisition of AELS and others in the Northeast U.S.,” commented Pace® CEO, Eric Roman. “Convenient locations and added capacity mean faster results for regulatory compliance and critical decision-making. This is important to our clients.” Within the last 18 months Pace® has added 16 locations in the Northeast, totaling 47 in the region and building the company’s nationwide footprint to 127 laboratories and service centers.

AELS has been supporting New Jersey public water systems with testing and operational support services, ensuring drinking water is safe and wastewater is responsibly managed. “I am proud to have created a business that provides environmental consulting to help remediate potable drinking water facilities that support fellow members of the New Jersey community,” AELS Founder and President, Michael Furrey said. “Our highly trained team of laboratory technicians and experts in drinking water operations will be a great addition to the Pace® team. We look forward to serving clients in an even greater capacity with all the resources and services available through the Pace® nationwide laboratory network.”

AELS provides a unique offering of laboratory, field testing, and operational support services, both similar and complementary to those offered by Pace®. “AELS is a great addition to the Pace® network, bringing us exceptional talent, resources, and added capacity to support our Northeast clients,” adds Greg Whitman, President of Pace® Analytical Services. “Now, as a unified team, AELS clients will benefit from the added capacity and services Pace® provides, including our extensive list of Specialty Testing Services.”

Pace® is a portfolio company of Leonard Green & Partners and Los Angeles-based Aurora Capital Partners.
