IMEG has taken a strategic step to enhance its industrial market presence by merging with SSI Consulting, LLC, a national leader in the design and inspection of silos and bulk handling facility layouts. This partnership enriches IMEG's capabilities and expands its service offerings for industrial clients across the cement, power, grain, and coal sectors.

Founded in 2013 by Gerry Lynskey, the SSI Consulting team brings decades of specialized experience in this niche market, having completed thousands of projects across North America and beyond. Renowned for their client-first approach, SSI Consulting operates as an extension of facility staff, providing innovative, real-world solutions that ensure safety, reliability, and operational efficiency in industrial facilities.

"We are excited to welcome SSI Consulting to IMEG, further strengthening our expertise in the industrial market," said IMEG President/CEO Paul VanDuyne. "Their specialized knowledge in silo inspection and design enhances our ability to deliver comprehensive, end-to-end solutions for industrial clients. By integrating their expertise with our multidisciplinary engineering services, we are expanding our capabilities to provide even greater value, innovation, and safety-focused solutions for industrial facilities across the nation."

"Joining IMEG presents an exciting opportunity for our team and our clients," said SSI Consulting President Gerry Lynskey. "By integrating our specialized expertise with IMEG's national resources and full-service capabilities, we can enhance our service offerings and continue delivering high-value solutions for industrial clients. This partnership strengthens our staff and allows us to scale our expertise while maintaining our commitment to safety and operational efficiency."

Mr. Lynskey will serve as the team's client executive, overseeing operations with existing SSI Consulting staff. The firm will continue to operate nationally, doing business for the foreseeable future as SSI Consulting, now IMEG.
