

VHB Welcomes Connecticut Engineering Firm Close, Jensen and Miller

January 06, 2025

VHB is pleased to announce it is joining forces with Close, Jensen and Miller, P.C. (CJM), a prominent civil engineering firm based in Wethersfield, Connecticut.

Established in 1926, CJM has built a robust reputation for delivering comprehensive consulting engineering services, including bridge, highway, hydraulic design, construction support, and land surveying. By welcoming CJM, VHB will add 26 transportation engineering and design professionals to the New England team—nearly 1,000 strong—increasing our company's capacity to deliver complex transportation projects in Connecticut and throughout the company.

"With the addition of CJM, VHB is better positioned to maximize opportunities within Connecticut and broaden our impact on the communities we serve," said Robin Bousa, Managing Director, VHB Connecticut. "The CJM team's extensive experience and established client relationships will strengthen our structural team and enhance our ability to deliver integrated services to all of our transportation clients."

Robert Brickley, the current Executive Vice President of CJM, will transition to VHB's leadership team in a transportation leadership role and will collaborate closely with John Hapkiewicz, VHB's Connecticut Director of Transportation, to enhance project delivery and fortify local client relationships.

Reflecting on the change, Brickley said, "We are very happy to join VHB. This provides our team members with access to additional resources to continue to deliver critical infrastructure projects for the Connecticut Department of Transportation (CTDOT). It also creates new opportunities for career growth and professional development as part of a larger, dynamic team."

Both firms share a foundation of quality, integrity, and responsiveness, providing a seamless transition for clients.
